

SALE OF LIQUOR TO MINORS MUST END SAYS MAYOR

One Application for a License Refused by City Council

The sale of liquor to minors in Dixon, which was a subject of recent police investigation, coupled with the permitting of minors to loiter about such places where beer and liquor is dispensed, has resulted in one dealer being refused a license and threats of revocation of others. Mayor C. C. Dixon addressed the city council at the conclusion of the weekly session last evening, made the announcement of his intentions.

The application of H. R. Durham, pool hall proprietor at 111 Hennepin avenue, a half block from the city hall, for a license brought the comment from the mayor. The enforcement of the liquor ordinance in Dixon is clearly up to the proprietor of such places of business and it is his duty to determine whether or not those who are in his place of business are minors or not. In case of doubt, he should eject them, was the mayor's statement, and he added:

One License Refused
"One application for a license to retail beer has not been granted by this council and will not be re-issued. That license is the one asked for by H. R. Durham, 111 Hennepin avenue. It is not necessary for me to discuss the reason why this license is refused, entirely but I will say that it was for misconduct in the operation of his place of business. He has permitted minors to loiter about his place repeatedly and that in itself is a sufficient offense."

"Minors are to be kept out of these places where beer and liquor are sold and if the rule is not obeyed, I will revoke every license in Dixon. This is the last mention of this offense to be made publicly and the next move will be the revocation of the licenses where the violations are permitted and fines will also be imposed."

During the past few days, it was reported, members of the police department called on all beer and liquor dealers in the city, issuing a final warning against the practice of selling to minors and permitting them loitering about such places. Several applications for dairy and soft drink licenses were granted by the council. Applications for permits to erect electric signs were granted Lester Wilson, 81 Galena avenue, and Miss Elizabeth Ford, 123 First street. George Erwin was named to audit the accounts of the several city departments for the fiscal year just closed.

Fire Chief Reports
The annual report of Fire Chief William B. Mitchell was filed. There was a "re-ater" number of fires in Dixon between April 21, 1933 and April 21, 1934 than in recent years but the loss was much less. 130 alarms were responded to in Dixon and the community fire truck answered 17 calls. Damage to buildings amounted to $5,200 and to contents, $1,825, the report stated. His report in detail:

Fire calls in city	130
Fire calls in country	17
Total fire calls	147
Valuation of buildings involved in city	$159,400.00
Valuation of contents involved in city	52,400.00
Insurance on buildings involved in city	102,400.00
Insurance on contents involved in city	23,450.00

FORMER LEE CO. MAN KILLED IN OKLA. ACCIDENT

Frank C. Goetzenberger Lost Life in Crash Near Claremore

Frank C. Goetzenberger, aged 23, former Franklin Grove resident was instantly killed Monday afternoon in a three-way collision on a state highway ten miles east of Claremore, Okla., according to word received by relatives here late yesterday. Two others were late fatally injured in the crash, press reports said one of whom, a youth named Chiff, otherwise unknown was a companion of the deceased. Frank Goetzenberger is a nephew of Frank and Harry Stephan and a cousin of Mrs. John Bohnstiel of this city. He was born in Franklin Grove, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Goetzenberger. His father passed away several years ago and his mother, Mrs. H. E. Zugswardt, now resides in Chadwick. Frank spent his early boyhood in Franklin Grove and upon his graduation from high school, entered the University of Illinois at Champaign.

Was Musician
He was a member of the University band for three years and while pursuing his studies, specialized in musical training, became a saxophone soloist and was expert on various other instruments. He became affiliated with orchestras composed of college students and had made several long tours with these organizations. As a member of the Glenn Lee orchestra, and on his way home to visit his mother at Chadwick, he met his death.

Caught in Traffic
According to Associated Press reports, John Barrett of Tulsa, Okla., who witnessed the accident, stated that Goetzenberger attempted to pass a gasoline truck when he faced three conveyance cars with trailers close upon him and attempted to turn his car back in the line of traffic. In so doing, his car was said to have sideswiped the truck and one of the approaching machines.

With two other members of the band, John Heiden, 21, of Freeport, and Russell Howland, he figured in an automobile collision at Waco, Texas, Sunday in which three persons from Dallas met their death. Heiden was charged with negligent homicide, the report states, but the case was dismissed.

BULLETS, RAKE FOIL ROBBERS IN ROUND LAKE

One Captured as Two Companions Flee in Automobile

Round Lake, Ill., Apr. 24-(AP)—Three bandits came gunning for bank money today, but they left hurriedly without it—two in a shower of bullets and one in an ambulance.

A quick-shooting banker, a swarm of vigilantes and a barrage of lead and garden tools sent them packing.

At 9:30 A. M., leaving one man at the wheel of their black Chevrolet coach, the pair marched right up to the cage and asked E. C. Weber, the bank president, for a job.

Then, suddenly, one announced "This is a stickup!"

"The hell it is!" retorted Weber reaching for his shooting iron.

Two bullets came sailing at Weber from the sentry at the door. But he didn't have to dodge. The slugs merely cracked the bullet-proof glass surrounding his cage.

Vigilantes Respond
He reached for the opening and fired back three times. The robbers took to their heels, but the town vigilantes had heard the call to battle and were already swarming round.

A bullet dropped one robber as he raced for cover toward a lumberyard. William Luebe, dressing up his garden nearby, grabbed his rake and whacked the wounded bandit on the head to keep him down. The other two took to their car and raced westward out of town.

The wounded man, taken to a hospital at Waukegan to have his leg injury dressed, gave his name as Archie Rhodes, and said he was "a bum." Officers said he was thoroughly drunk.

Everyone agreed none of the bandits looked like Dillinger gangsters.

Cleveland Mounted Police Restore Order Among Strikers

Washington, April 24-(AP)—Railway labor leaders and managers reported "progress" today after a conference on the wage dispute. W. F. Thierhoff, chairman of the managers committee, and A. F. A packet was stabbed at St. Louis where 3,000 workers left their jobs at the Chevrolet Motor Company and Fisher Body plants asking union recognition. Eight men were arrested for stoning trucks carrying workers from the plants.

Chicago, April 24-(AP)—Robert Wilson, 32, confessed to police late last night that he participated in the $45,000 robbery of the Bluff, Ill., State Bank on November 17, last year.

In a signed confession to Deputy Chief of Detectives Walter Storms, Wilson also admitted he took several hundred dollars from the Bluff Postmaster, who entered the bank during the robbery.

Police said he admitted taking part in robberies of banks in Nauvoo and Burnside, Ill., but refused to include these in his signed confession.

Bandits Reported to Have Been Seen in Milwaukee Today

BULLETIN

St. Paul April 24-(AP)—A mysterious midnight raid on an Ellsworth, Wis., oil station by three desperate men who kidnaped the proprietor today intensified the search for John Dillinger mobsters in the Twin City area.

Ellsworth is about 200 miles southwest of Mercer, Wis., where the Dillinger gang cut out a large force of officers Sunday, and about 40 miles northeast of the Twin Cities.

Victor Langer was in his oil station nine miles east of Ellsworth, with two other men when three armed men attempted to hold him up.

Langer slammed the door in their faces.
The raiders disappeared and Langer and his two companions went into the attic, suspecting that the strangers might be Dillinger associates.

An hour later Langer came downstairs. As he appeared downstairs, one

Home Town Asks Protection from Its Infamous Son

Mooreville, Ind., April 24-(AP)—John Dillinger's home town asked today for military protection against his infamous son.

A resolution to Governor Paul V. McNutt from the Mooreville Board of Trustees set forth that the citizens "are not equipped with weapons of a nature to cope with a man who carries a machine gun and bullet-proof vests."

It asked the Governor to send National Guardsmen, "if necessary," or a sufficient number of deputies to give the townsfolk "adequate protection" against the desperado whose activities the resolution termed "a disgrace and danger to the people of the state."

The resolution was the town's official answer to reports that Mooreville favored amnesty for Dillinger.

of the holdup men hurled a large plank through a window while a companion flourished a pistol.

"Come on out of there," snarled the gunman.

Langer obeyed. He then was forced to get into his own car and drive them three miles. They robbed him of $35.

Langer then was told to "get on out of here." The men disappeared in the darkness.

IN MILWAUKEE
Milwaukee, April 24-(AP)—Sheriffs of southeastern Wisconsin were warned today to watch for a large, dark sedan carrying four men, one of whom had a machine gun aboard his lap. Such a car was reported to have sped through Milwaukee at 8 A. M., and police said they believed the occupants may have been Dillinger gangsters.

The sedan was reported by Richard R. Berkwith and John Miller, motormen for the electric company lines, to have cut in front of one of the trollies.

Saw Weapons
Berkwith said that from the elevation of his platform he could see a pistol lying on the front seat beside the driver. In the rear seat, he said, were three men, the two on the outside having pistols on their laps and the one in the middle a machine gun across his knees.

Miller, who was operating the street car behind Berkwith's said "They were traveling at least 60 miles an hour," said Berkwith. "They barely missed the front of my car."

INSULL REVEALS HOW HE ELUDED ATHENS POLICE

Former "Little Giant" of Utilities World Tells of Flight

By JOHN LLOYD (Associated Press Foreign Staff.) (Copyright, 1934, by The Associated Press.)

Aboard the S. S. Exilona, Apr. 24-(AP)—Bit by bit, as the S. S. Exilona bears him homeward to face his accusers, Samuel Insull, Sr., has disclosed the story of his dramatic dash for freedom aboard the ancient tramp steamer Malotis from Athens into the eastern Mediterranean.

Extremely reticent at first, he gradually has become more talkative until, piecing together the incidents he has related, it is possible to reconstruct the adventure in almost its entirety.

His lips have remained sealed regarding the country where he finally decided to seek refuge, but, otherwise, few questions have gone unanswered. He reflects back upon the Malotis' cruise with an apparent mixture of emotion and memories that are not altogether bitter.

His story is best told in installments, as each of the three phases into which the happenings fall has its particular characteristics.

The first deals with his incognito departure from Athens; the second is confined to his wanderings at sea in quest of a sanctuary; the third refers to the events which led him to a Turkish jail and later into the hands of American authorities.

Here is his story
Here is the story as told by the white-haired old man through the smoke of after-dinner cigars in the cozy lounge of this trim little American steamer, homeward bound by coincidence from a "vagabond cruise" that originally had nothing to do with his flight.

May Be In Woods
There are also rumors that the Dillinger gang, which apparently split into two groups after the Sunday night gun fights near Mercer, lost another man in the gunfire in the Wisconsin woods.

Army of Picked Men Combing Woods for Crafty Killer

Mercer, Wis., April 24-(AP)—Through the wooded wilds of the north country, freshly white with snow, an army of determined men hunted big game today—John Dillinger.

Crafty as a fox and ruthless as the wolf that sometimes prowls the lush-snarled timber lands of northern Wisconsin, the gunman from Indiana continued to elude one of the most extensive manhunts the northlands ever have known.

"Dillinger, Luck," was musing; but the feeling was strong among the hunters that John Dillinger—cop-killer, bank robber, highwayman and jail fugitive—was very close to his last stand.

The government had nearly 100 picked men on the job. Some of them drafted from points as far distant as Philadelphia and Washington. Many airplanes dropped from the skies, bringing reinforcements.

"Shoot To Kill" Orders
The Department of Justice men were under orders to shoot to kill. The sentiment was openly expressed that Dillinger dead would be more desirable to the forces of law than Dillinger alive. The memory of the outlaw's latest victim—a government agent slain as Dillinger blamed his way from a tavern near here Sunday night—was not calculated to encourage the officers to take any chances with the heavily armed desperado and his gang of criminals.

Dillinger was believed hiding today either in his northwoods country or to have taken refuge in one of several hideouts he is believed to have prepared in the Twin Cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The casualty list from Sunday night's two gun fights remained two dead and four wounded, with the condition of one of the wounded men critical.

Thought in St. Paul
The belief that Dillinger may be in one of the Twin Cities arose after the skirmish which three men had yesterday with three deputy sheriffs in St. Paul Park, a suburb of St. Paul. One of the men is believed to have been Dillinger.

The deputies who had been guarding the roads in the search for the Dillinger mob, exchanged shots when they encountered the trio in a small automobile bearing Wisconsin license plates. Here again fortune smiled on Dillinger—

Dillinger it was.

A lumbering truck coming in from a side street delayed the deputies machine just long enough to permit the trio to escape. One of their number however, was believed to have been wounded. Blood stains were discovered in the trio's car when it was found, abandoned.

There were also rumors that the Dillinger gang, which apparently split into two groups after the Sunday night gun fights near Mercer, lost another man in the gunfire in the Wisconsin woods.

The rumor had it that the victim's body had been carried away in the woods—in which some investigators believe that Mooreville, Ind., "bad boy" had gone into hiding.

Audiences Prefer Varied Concerts

In the last few years there has been a decided trend towards more varied concerts. Rachmaninoff, Paderewski and McCormack can still pack houses; but on the average, audiences are preferring more varied programs. This past season the Tokatyan Trio had an extended tour—the Trio being composed of Armand Tokatyan, Metropolitan tenor; Sonia Sharnova, contralto with the Chicago Civic Opera Co.; and Hans Miss, celebrated cellist. This concert proved to be the most popular on the series where they were presented. During the thirteen years that the vic Music Hall has functioned, a new concert audience has come into being; an audience that has grown up with the radio, an audience that demands variety.

It is the duty of music lovers to supply this new audience with the kind of concerts they desire and in this way get them into concert halls and make confirmed concertgoers out of them. This coming season Nini Theilade, premiere danseuse with Max Reinhardt's theaters, is touring with the Whittey Chamber Music Ensemble; this combination of a superb dancer with an excellent ensemble is proving most attractive to many committees. Young people, in particular, are interested in this concert.

Talmadge-Jessel Wedding Monday

Atlantic City, N. J. April 24—(AP)—Norma Talmadge, star of the silent screen, now is Mrs. George Jessel.

She and the stage comedian were married at the Hotel Ambassador late yesterday after keeping the wedding plans a secret since last Thursday when they obtained a marriage license. "I'm Mrs. Jessel now, all right," said Miss Talmadge after the ceremony. "And I love it."

"I've never been so happy in my life," Jessel said over and over after kissing Mayor Harry Bachrach, who performed the ceremony, and everyone in sight.

Less than a month ago Miss Talmadge obtained a Mexican divorce from Joseph Schenck, the producer.

For two years the former movie actress and Jessel had been denying reports they would wed.

The couple will remain here until Friday when Jessel begins a week's vaudeville engagement in New York. After that he said, they will go to Florida.

Miss Talmadge, all smiles, darted to a telephone immediately after the ceremony to talk to her sisters, Constance and Natalie, in California.

"Am I happy?" she yelled. "Do you think I would have done it unless I was sure I would be happy?"

St. Anne's Choir Sang at Rochelle

St. Anne's choir, which is directed by Miss Eleanor Hennessy, and Mrs. William Rourke, organist, were guests at St. Mary's church at Rochelle Sunday and sang the high mass.

Miss Hennessy, besides directing, played the violin music for the choir. After the mass, the Rochelle choir entertained the Dixon choir at dinner at the Rochelle country club.

In the afternoon a group of seven, at the suggestion of Miss Louise Murphy drove to Aurora, Ill., and visited with Rev. Father Flynn.

They found that Father Flynn's health has greatly improved, and he sent his greetings to his friends in Dixon.

Miss Hennessy and Mrs. Rourke are to be congratulated on the satisfactory program which was rendered by the choir, and the Rochelle group were loud in their praises, and the hospitality they extended was thoroughly enjoyed and deeply appreciated by the entire Dixon organization.

Love

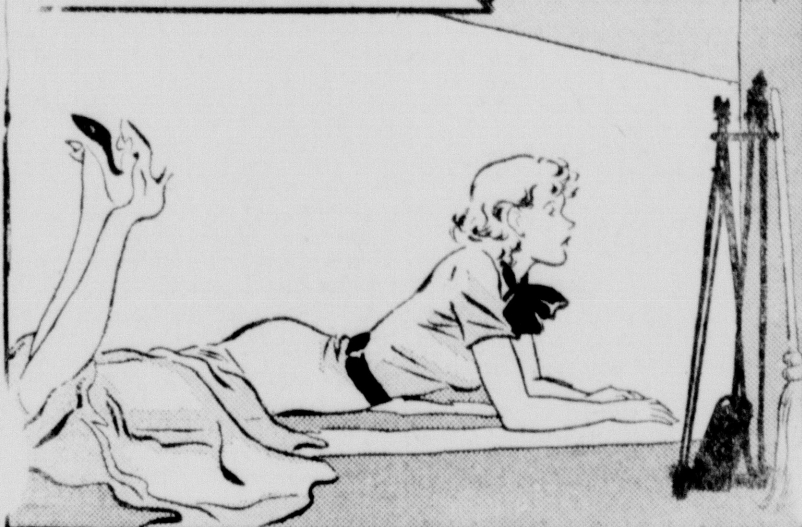

By Helen Welshimer

LOVE is a pretty dream, you say,
Brief as the showers that fall in May,
Fleet as a bird on wing.
A fairy story that should be left
In the heart of a picture book;
A fantasy that one never finds
Though he run with a questing look.

YOU never have held a rainbow, dear,
Yet you have seen its glow.
On a summer's day when a storm is done,
Seventy times, I know!

Faith is the substance of things unseen,
We trust till the world's doors close.
When did you touch a star, a wind,
The fragrance that haunts a rose?

THE sea goes out with the ebbing tide,
The end of the stars brings dawn;
The cycle of seedtime and harvesting
Year after year goes on.
So surely your love will come to you,
In peace or to maddened drums,
Or a heart must turn to another heart
And to it when it comes!

Gloria Swanson to Leave Michael Farmer

New York, April 24—(AP)—Gloria Swanson and her fourth husband, F. Michael Farmer, have reached a parting of the ways, and the movie actress plans an early divorce.

"I have thought about the matter for a long time," Miss Swanson said, "and I have decided our marriage was a mistake."

She and Farmer, Irish sportsman and broker, were married in 1931. They have one child, Bridget Michael, born in London in 1932.

Miss Swanson said she would seek a divorce in California on grounds of incompatibility and mental cruelty.

Recent Hollywood reports have linked the names of the actress and Herbert Marshall, but Miss Swanson ridiculed the suggestion of a romance with Marshall.

In her dressing room at a Broadway theater, where she is appearing, the screen actress told of her fourth marital rift.

"Michael," she said, "belongs in one world and I belong in another. I have my work and I like to do what I'm doing."

"He has just returned from a lovely yachting trip to Norway, and I hear that he intends to take a trip around the world."

"How nice that Mr. Farmer has so much leisure. I am glad he is enjoying himself. For my part, I have obligations and it's up to me to take care of them. That is why I am here working."

Farmer is now in Paris with their child.

Paris, Apr. 24—(AP)—Michael Farmer said today he had not heard Gloria Swanson was considering filing a divorce suit, but admitted he is remaining in France.

The Irish husband of the American film star added sadly: "In the movie world, something always seems to happen when a husband and wife are apart."

EVERYBODY A SUSPECT.

(From The Chicago Daily News)

A bill to make every American a criminal suspect, a bill to establish a permanent bureaucratic business inquisition, has just been introduced in Washington. It is the most amazing act of dictatorial effrontery yet ventured by the brain trust.

These young reformers who for so long have enjoyed the President's confidence may differ among themselves as to the exact degree of "social control" this country needs. But there are four things on which they are all agreed: Their hatred of business and business men as such; their desire for vengeance on former business leaders; their lust for power, and their own supreme self-confidence.

Their methods may be subtle but their aim is simplicity itself. What is the problem? Is it banking? Is it credit? Is it agriculture? Is it industry? Is it labor? Their solution in every case is the same: Give full power to the President or his agents, and leave the rest to them.

In the hope of inconspicuously doing traditional Americanism to death, the "little group of lawyers" who write the brain-trust legislation slipped doses of ground glass into the otherwise not entirely bad securities act and the stock exchange bill. But business is waking up and in turn is shaking awake a long dormant congress. There is talk now of amending both the stock exchange bill and the securities act in such a way as to take out the ground glass.

This, supposedly, is the reason why the brain trust has hastily devised a new and even deadlier concoction. The latest bill introduced reluctantly by Senator Dill, declares unlawful "all unfair methods of competition" or "deceptive acts and practices in or affecting commerce." As the words "deceptive acts" are nowhere defined, this appears to make every farmer, lawyer, doctor, minister, storekeeper, or indeed any one who is in any business or profession, a criminal suspect. For the rest, the bill makes the federal trade commission directly responsible, not to congress, but to the President or his agents, and then gives it power to investigate any one, at any time, and to "prevent" the "unfair" or "deceptive" acts and practices. In short, it sets up an irresponsible economic inquisition.

The democratic revolutions of the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries were caused mainly by the resentment of individuals against the inquisitorial economic power exercised over them by kings or kings' agents. It was to put an end forever to such autocratic abuses in this land that our forefathers, risking lives and property, took up arms. But this Dill bill goes farther than most monarchs ever dreamed of going. It makes the President—any president—and his chief bureaucrats or political counselors the masters of every American's personal business affairs. Friends of the administration would doubtless be secure, but opponents could be ruthlessly investigated. And to prove some one guilty of an undefined "deceptive act" should be easy.

Sensible citizens have difficulty in believing that such utterly un-American thoughts are actually current today in administration circles. Yet here is the inescapable fact of the Dill bill. Better than any talk at "pink" dinner parties, better even than "socialization" books and speeches by administration radicals, it reveals the inner workings of the brain-trust mind.

MEDDLING AMERICANS.

The State Department's action in announcing its strong disapproval of the enrollment of United States aviators for war service in Colombia is perfectly understandable.

One good way of getting embroidered in the troubles of neighboring nations is to permit your citizens to take a prominent part in the fighting which those troubles cause.

The United States government, of course, can never be held responsible if individual Americans hire out to fight for warring factions in Latin-America; nevertheless, the fact that they do so helps to color Latin-America's notion of interference by the "Colossus of the North."

The soldier of fortune has an old and romantic tradition in this country, to be sure. But he has not, everything considered, been a wholesome influence.

It is not surprising that Washington feels called on to display a frown of disapproval.

FOR HEALTH AND HAPPINESS,

City dwellers are bound to take a good deal of interest in that recent decision of the U. S. circuit court of appeals in Chicago, in which it was ordered that the top 12 floors of a 20-story apartment building be removed so neighboring residents can have a little sunlight and fresh air.

"In the fight for better living conditions in large cities," says the court's decision, "in the contest for more light and air, more health and comfort—the scales are not well balanced if dividends to the individual outweigh health and happiness to the community."

Here's a point that often got lost in the shuffle, during the skyscraper building boom of the 20's. The decision may have a marked effect on the future course of building in our large cities.

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The Times ran up to the gate of Mother Goose Land. "I can't wait until we get inside," said one, "I sure am curious!"

"Of this fine place we've often read, but now we'll visit here, instead. I think that Mother Goose is being very kind to us."

"That's quite all right," said their new friend. "I'm always very glad to lend a hand to little people who desire to see new sights."

"You see, I know just who you are and that you've traveled wide and far. Why, everybody knows about the happy Tynmites."

"Now, when we're right up at the gate, I'll knock, and then we'll have to wait until somebody lets us in. I don't know whom I will be."

"I'll make no difference, though, because each one in Mother Goose Land does just as I tell them to. I am the ruler here, you see."

The knock brought forth a little lad. He swung the gates and said, "I'm glad to see some nice, new playmates. Won't you youngsters come inside?"

Said Mother Goose "Of course they will. I've brought them here to get a thrill. I found them way up in the air, and took them for a ride."

Wee Goldy told the lad her name, and added, "Gee, I'm glad we came. If all the tots in this land are like you, we'll have real fun."

"They're better still," the lad said. Then he cried, "I'll see you all again." As Dotty watched him scamper off, she shouted, "See him run!"

Soon Coppy spied a great big shoe. Said Mother Goose "That's new to you, and it's the house where an old lady houses tots galore."

"The shoe home is a funny sight. I wish you could sleep there to-night, but it's so full of children now, that there's no room for more."

Living Our Everyday Lives

PAIN, PRAYER, POETRY

(By Dr. Joseph Fort Newton.)

Grace Noll Crowell lay flat on her back, due to an injury at the time of the birth of her baby boy. Young, loving life, joyous in her home, she stared into a gray future. She was doomed, it seemed, to be an invalid for the rest of her life.

But she did not give up, despite a sinking sense of dismay. Or, it would be truer to say that she did give herself up to something, or someone, other and greater than herself. She learned to be still, to wait, to pray, and to listen for the answer.

One day she took a pen in her hesitant, untrained hand, dipped it in prayer, and wrote a little poem. It was not a great poem—its feet faltered and stumbled, she tells us—but at least they got somewhere. She did not know how to write poetry, but she learned, singing in her songs what she had been taught in sorrow.

Today her poems go all over the world, and some of them have been meat, milk and medicine to millions of people. She not only listened until she heard the answer to her prayer, but she learned to know the Answerer, as Whitman would say. Only a great angel could tell the story of the courage, cheer, faith and fortitude which her simple songs have brought to her fellow souls.

Some of her poems—such as "Some One Had Prayed," and "Wait"—have been translated into many languages, set to music and sung and kept and reread by hungry-hearted men and women. Letters from all over the earth pour in upon her, thanking her for help.

LOOK OUT FOR THESE SYMPTOMS OF CONSTIPATION

Get Relief with Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sallow complexions, and sleeplessness are often warning signs of common constipation. Unless checked, constipation may impair health.

Today, you can usually get rid of common constipation by eating a delicious cereal. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" and vitamin B to aid regularity. ALL-BRAN is also a good source of blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears the intestines of wastes. How much better than taking patent medicines.

Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation. Chronic cases, with every meal. If seriously ill, see your doctor. ALL-BRAN is not a "cure-all."

Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or use in cooking. Appetizing recipes on the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Daily Health Talk

THE SURGEON'S DREAM

It is not often that the surgeon indulges himself in the luxury of day-dreaming. When he does, the results are usually more than interesting, for such excursions of fancy often forecast the accomplishments of tomorrow.

An outstanding authority in traumatic surgery, a man of wide experience, set down the following as the things he wished for:

First and foremost he wanted some anodyne to relieve pain; something that could be given in tablet or capsule form, which would have no after-effects, which would not dry up the normal secretions of the body, be habit-forming, or bring with its anodyne effects other and undesirable reactions.

What a blessing such an anodyne would be, say in the case of the badly burned child. What a gratifying thing it would be to have some super-anodyne that would be universally efficacious without doing damage even to an infant.

Next to the surgeon wanted some sort of human glue that would make it unnecessary to use stitches to close up wounds and to unite separated tissues. He would like to have this glue serve for bone fractures as well, so that when bone ends are exposed, an application of it would effectively seal them and render other forms of retentive apparatus unnecessary.

A portable emergency X-ray apparatus that would work on any electric light socket and that would be safe and effective, and an automatic film which would be self-developing, are two other aids the surgeon enjoys dreaming about.

He also wishes for a universal antiseptic which would be effective against all forms of infecting agents. This dream, he ventures to judge, is not beyond the realm of possibility, and in fact he goes so far as to say that he feels "reasonably certain" that it will take the form of some agent that will change the local reaction of the tissues so that it will be impossible for organisms to grow in that particular location."

STATE NRA ACT FACING BATTLE IN LEGISLATURE

Bill to Give State Control Of Business Opposed

Springfield, Ill., April 24—(AP)—Much is at stake in efforts this week by Governor Horner's administration to pass a state NRA act.

The administration is bending every effort to enact the measure for fear its failure to pass would be interpreted nationally as a rebuff to the federal recovery program from the Democratic legislature of the third largest state in the union.

The bill, introduced last week at the request of the national NRA authorities, has aroused the active opposition of the Chicago Association of Commerce, the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, and the Council of Illinois Merchants.

With these three organizations and others opposing the state administration, it is probable that since the adjournment of the legislature, which had been planned for this week, will be delayed. The House will hold a public hearing on the measure Wednesday.

Three essentials of the bill are:

1. State and local officials and employees are authorized to aid in enforcement of the NRA which becomes a part of the state's statutes.
2. Penalties for violation of codes, which become the standard of fair competition in the state, are provided and may be assessed by state courts.
3. The state and all of its political subdivisions are prohibited from purchasing any but code made goods.

The Democratic state convention, which met here last Friday, was enthusiastic in its endorsement of the federal recovery program. In its platform it said: "We endorse unqualifiedly the entire recovery program."

With this declaration in its platform, which was approved by Governor Horner before it was submitted to the convention, the state administration can do little other than make a strenuous fight for the NRA bill.

But there is still another reason why the state administration is fighting for the measure.

Illinois Democracy has long been split into two camps—the Federal and the state groups. The latter has received little of the Federal patronage. It would willingly join forces with the Federal crowd, which so far failed to evidence much enthusiasm for such state leaders as Patrick Nash, Democratic National Committeeman, and Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago.

It is with this state group that Governor Horner is allied, although on several occasions he has shown definite indications of departing from their camp.

If the NRA bill failed to pass the present chasm between the two groups might widen; on the other hand, if the Governor and his cohorts can pass the measure—thus evidencing full cooperation with the national administration—differences might be bridged.

Business Men Fight
The state group has sought on numerous occasions to make itself felt at Washington but few of the political plums which have been dispensed have found their way into the hands of any one in its ranks.

While these considerations motivate the bill's advocates, its foes are claiming the measure is an intrusion into business.

James L. Donnelly, Executive Vice President of the Manufacturers' Association, said:

"The bill is the most flagrant intrusion into private business on record. 'Every governmental code and supplementary order issued by the NRA will automatically become a part of the law of Illinois. All the police and judges will be required to see that the Federal government's attitude is carried out locally.'"

The Chicago Association of Commerce has charged the bill "violates the fundamental principles of our Democratic form of government."

The Council of Illinois Merchants, which led the fight on the sales tax act, had charged the bill is another indication the state administration wants "to take over control of business in Illinois."

Modern "Minute Men" in Capital Protest

By way of celebrating the 159th anniversary of the Battle of Lexington, when "the shot heard 'round the world" was fired, a delegation of modern "Minute Men" from that historic Massachusetts town presented a petition to Congress as a protest against "unreasonable interference" by the Federal government in the affairs of a "free people". Here the delegation is seen presenting the petition to Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers on the steps of the Capitol. Left to right: J. C. Hutchinson, E. L. Fenn, Robert H. INSULL REVEALS HOW HE ELUDED ATHENS POLICE ing to do with the adventures of Insull.

It begins early in the morning of March 14 when the one-time "little giant" of the utilities business sat pondering over orders to leave Greece within a matter of hours.

No one expected a man in his 74th year, who had been described as in a serious condition from a heart ailment, to resort to the methods that Samuel Insull was at that moment turning over in his mind. Consequently, none of the sentinels on duty was prepared to penetrate the disguise of the man they watched—a man whom they were about to see appear as 25 years younger. This fact, Insull decided, would permit him to pass through their lines.

Colored His Hair
Procuring a box of blacking such as women use to touch up their hair, he set to work—coloring his hair and moustache. He worked patiently, and finally accomplished a remarkable transformation. He gazed with interest at the mirror where there stared at him eyes shaded by rich black brows and set off by equally black hair and moustache.

The rest was, he says, "as easy as falling off a log." He simply removed his glasses in order to complete his disguise, then walked boldly out the door, passing within a few feet of those watching for him.

He said he was really walking a little unsteadily because it was difficult for him to steer a straight course without his spectacles. However, the guards were not unaccustomed to seeing gentlemen who walk unsteadily at that time of morning and no one moved to stop him.

He progressed down the street until he reached a taxi stand, then he hired a cab, drove past the pickets and reached Piraeus where the Malotis was waiting.

Chartered by Friends
It was, he said, chartered for him by friends whose names he refused to divulge.

Once aboard, he went directly to the cabin and remained close inside until the dingy freighter could be made ready to weigh anchor.

It was 5 P. M. before the scoty old vessel cleared the harbor and he could come out for air.

When the Greek authorities became aware of his whereabouts late the next day, they ordered the Malotis to put back under the threat of sending a warship in pursuit.

It was hours after they doubled back on their course before Captain Ioannis Mousouris, the Master of the ship, for whom Insull professes a great regard, could bring himself to inform his aged passenger of the situation.

Insull recounts the incident with great amusement. He says he was sitting on the deck, fully cognizant of the change of route, when the Captain started explaining with profuse apologies and expressions of regret.

Insull interrupted with the demand:

"You see that sun? Now look at the direction we are going. I have known about it for hours. I was just waiting to see how long it would take you to work up the courage to inform me."

KEPT ABOARD SHIP

Casablanca, Morocco, April 24—(AP)—A heavy police cordon was thrown around the S. S. Exilona when she arrived here at 11:30 A. M. today and her prisoner-passenger, Samuel Insull, was not permitted to go ashore.

Local newspapermen were kept away from the ship by police, at the request of the Exilona's captain.

The Exilona will sail at 7 P. M. tonight for Boston. Returning the former utilities operator to American soil for criminal trial.

All morning the ship tugged along the African coast, through a heavy, rolling sea. Insull, probably the best sailor of all the passengers, seemed to enjoy greatly the swell. It was a bright, sunny day.

WOODEN PISTOL BANDIT'S WOMEN REMAIN LOYAL

Have Taken Desperate Chances and Kept Tight Lipped

BULLETIN

Madison, Wis., April 24—(AP)—The three women arrested by federal agents when they raided a resort near Eagle River in search for John Dillinger, Indiana desperado, and his associates were lodged in the Dane county jail here today.

The women, who refused to give their names or discuss their part in the Dillinger markunt, were driven to Madison in an automobile last night by federal agents who apparently feared a delivery at the Vilas county jail.

Jail attaches here refused to discuss the transfer of the women to Madison. There was a possibility that the women would be arraigned in U. S. District Court here inasmuch as it has jurisdiction over the western Wisconsin district, which includes Iron and Vilas counties, scene of the latest encounter with Dillinger.

Milwaukee, April 24 —(AP)—John Dillinger's women associates have been loyal to him.

Several have taken desperate chances to aid the Indiana bad man and all of them have been tight-lipped when questioned by authorities about his movements and plans.

A 20-year-old half Indian girl, Evelyn Frechette of Neopit, Wis., has figured most often in Dillinger's escapades. She is now held in federal custody at St. Paul on charge she helped the outlaw escape a police trap there March 31.

Captured in a Chicago tavern, the Frechette girl told officers Dillinger had slipped away when they entered the place. She chided them for having missed their quarry.

She was with Dillinger and other members of his gang when they were captured last fall at Tucson, Arizona. She was returned to Chicago and subsequently released.

Three Refuse Names
The three girls seized yesterday at a Vilas county resort near Eagle River, Wis., from which Dillinger and six companions had shot their way to freedom several hours previously, were equally uncommunicative about the men with whom they had arrived at the resort last Friday. They also refused to tell their names.

Apparently fearing a jail delivery federal agents removed the three from the Eagle River jail, to an unannounced jail late yesterday afternoon.

A mystery woman figured in Dillinger's sensational wooden gun escape from the Crown Point, Ind., jail. She visited him and was believed to have arranged a temporary refuge for him while police searched Chicago and vicinity.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

PABLITO, a handsome youth accused of a murder he did not commit, escapes from Key West to Havana with two thieves, BEAU and LOTTIE. In Havana, under the name of "Juanito," he becomes absorbed as a boxer and he and Beau open a gymnasium.

Pablito loves ESTELLE FIELD, daughter of rich Jim Field, and she loves him. They meet and plan to marry, but Field breaks up the affair, taking Estelle away. Two years later she becomes engaged to ALEC DAVIDS.

SIR AUBREY, titled Englishman and Pablito's father, has been searching for his son, employing BILLINGS, New York detective, to find him.

Believing Estelle faithless, Pablito asks Lottie to marry him. Field loses his fortune and thus breaks his engagement to Estelle. She and her father return to Havana. MARCIA TREADAWAY, who knows Pablito is innocent of the murder charge, at last tells the truth.

Estelle writes Pablito, but, feeling he cannot break his engagement to Lottie, he does not go to her. NORRIS NOYES, who befriended Pablito as a child, comes to see him.

Lottie, realizing she stands between Pablito and his happiness, breaks her engagement and departs.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLVII

BILLINGS, who had written Pablito that Sir Aubrey wished to see him personally and asked the favor of Pablito's address in case he should change it at any time, was headed toward Cuba where he was to meet Sir Aubrey, also on his way there.

It would be hot in Cuba, Billings thought as he rode in the southward-speeding train on a warm August day. Yes, it would be hot in Cuba. But this would be his last trip on the case that had taken so long to untangle. The case that had held so much interest for him.

Marica Treadaway, at Como, had met the eyes of a woman who no longer knew her. And Marica had smiled, seeing in this the sign that her tale was now an old one and that Pablito was safe.

Carlito was kneeling in the Church of the Angels, asking the gentle mother of Christ to forgive him for his intent to kill Jim Field who, before Carlito had reached this triumphant moment, had killed himself. Near Carlito was his son, "Madre Santissima de Jesus." Carlito entreated, "guard my son from the pain I have known and the evil that it caused!"

He left in the alms box a substantial part of his wages and stepped into the blistering heat of the dry street feeling that the gentle mother had smiled on him.

Estelle, living in three rooms of the great house that had been her father's, thought bitterly of the transience of men's affections, as she waited for the coming of the winter that would bring northerners to Cuba. Then again she would show the house to possible buyers—a little over-eagerly, perhaps, as she pointed out the beauties of the place and always stopping at the threshold of her father's office where one wet night he had locked the door after him before stepping through the door which is before all men.

She had heard from Pablito again and had burned the letter. She was through with caring for anyone. She would give nothing and take all she could get. In time, perhaps, she would learn to love material things that held no warm, treacherous, changing hearts.

Pablito, writing that second letter, had said that he was free, that he loved her and had always loved her, that he always would love her. She had smiled bitterly as she read the words, unable to forget the rebuff he had given her with the news that he was engaged. She was through, she decided. She would never again hold out her hands to pain.

The bell on the Field gate post clanged one late August afternoon as the sun was lying on the earth in long, thick, golden streaks. A shabby little boy opened the gate to Norris Noyes who said he had business with Miss Field.

"She is in the garden, I think," the boy said. "In the garden beyond the house. You may go there if you like to search for her. Found on the door if you do not find her there. She is somewhere around. She never goes anywhere else. She is sad—ah, sad!"

Noyes gave the shabby little boy a copper and then turned toward the garden that looked over the sea. There she was, away by a wall, a hand on it, her eyes fixed on the flashily white sail of a fishing boat. She turned as Noyes neared her.

"Yes?" she said. "You don't know me, my child," he began, "but I have business with you."

She could not resent the "my child" and in spite of the chill that she was trying to make her protection she felt drawn to this man with the gentle voice and kind, mild eyes.

"Shall we sit down?" she invited. She had not meant to say it. She moved ahead of him toward a marble bench which stood beneath a leaning magnolia tree.

HE settled after she did and turned toward her. "I feared Pablito," he began, and saw her stiffen. "I love him," he went on, "because I know him. Lottie—the girl he asked to marry him—loved him, too. Pablito asked her to marry him because of gratitude and for no other reason. She left us after she saw his face lose color, looking at you."

"There is no reason," the girl said unsteadily, "why I should listen to this."

"No. Many people feel they do not need to be kind. One sees it and feels it at every hand. But I think, in fairness to yourself and to Pablito, that you should listen."

She leaned back a little, still undecided and tense.

"If Pablito had been the sort of man who could abandon one woman to run to the arms of another I could understand you," Noyes went on. "But all his unhappiness—and yours—has been caused by his loyalty. You remember Lovelace's old line, don't you? 'I could not love thee, dear, so much loved I not honor more.' Women forget that line. You were engaged to be married, were you not, child?"

He heard her breath catch. "He said the house—half-finished—'Noyes went on. 'And now he says he will never build another. That is the wrong viewpoint for a young man, and a sad one. Yet I suppose it is natural. Quite natural.' He stood up then. 'Thank you for listening to me, child,' he said. 'An old man grows garrulous, trying to keep hearts from breaking when it is so unnecessary. An old man knows, looking backward, the pity of wasting anything so precious as this little time we are given here.'"

He bowed and Estelle put out her hand. "Send him to me," she said.

THIRTEEN HAVE LOST LIVES IN DILLINGER HUNT

Six Officers, an Equal Number of Bandits, One Bystander

Chicago, April 24—(AP)—The unlucky number—thirteen—is the toll of lives forfeited along the trail of John Dillinger, fugitive desperado, and his cohorts.

The score stands even—six peace officers have died with six associates of the Dillinger mob. The thirteenth victim was a by-stander.

Count Among Peace Officers:
Sheriff Jess Sarber, Allen county, O., slain October 12, 1933, by gangsters freeing Dillinger from jail.

Police Sergeant William T. Shanley killed in Chicago December 14, 1933, as John Hamilton, Dillinger aide, escaped the police net.

Eugene Teague, Indiana state policeman, slain December 29, 1933, in gun battle as Edward Shouse was captured.

Policeman William O'Malley of East Chicago, Ind., slain by bank robbers, with Dillinger charge with the crime.

Under Sheriff Charles Cavanaugh wounded fatally March 16 as Herbert Youngblood, the Negro who escaped with Dillinger from the Crown Point, Ind., jail was killed.

W. Carter Baum, Federal agent from Chicago, shot to death as Dillinger escaped trap near Mercer, Wis., April 22.

On The Other Side:

Lewis Katzewitz, Streator, Ill., Sam Ginsburg, escaped Michigan

Good "Beaver Money"

During the heyday of the fur trade many years ago, beaver skins passed as money. They had an established rating across the continent and as far east as the Atlantic coast of approximately four dollars for an average raw skin, says Nature Magazine. Following the transfer from hand to hand of the skins themselves other currency such as small stones or bits of metal, each bearing a crude drawing of a beaver and the initials or mark of a well-known trader and representing an actual skin lying in some storehouse, passed freely among traders and Indians.

prisoner, and Charles Tilden, escaped Illinois prisoner, slain December 21, 1933, by Chicago police seeking Dillinger in a north side apartment.

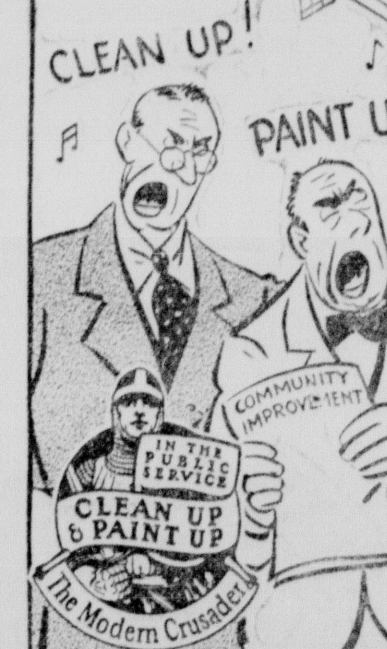

Jack Klutas shot to death January 6 by Chicago police hunting him and Dillinger.

Youngblood, killed in the gun battle with officers March 16 at Port Huron, Mich.

Eugene Green, who fled with Dillinger from a St. Paul apartment, died April 11 from gunshot wounds inflicted by government agents.

The bystander: Eugene Bolsonneau of Mellen, Wis., was killed April 22 as Dillinger fled the Little Bohemia resort.

LIVELIER BALL SHOWS RESULTS IN NINE GAMES

More Home Runs Hit in Both Leagues Than in 1933

If home run figures for the first seven days of the major league season furnish a true barometer then injections of a little more "rabbit" have been made not only in the National League ball but the American as well.

Although National League batsmen have shown the greatest percentage of slugging improvement—more than 200 per cent—swat-smiths of the American league, supposedly hitting at the same sphere they did a year ago, already have clouted nearly 60 per cent more homers than they did in the same period in 1933.

John Heydler's bombardiers who could hit only nine homers in their first 21 games last season, have banged out 28 in the same number of contests this year, an increase of 211 per cent. In the American League, the figures for the first 20 games showed 17 home runs in 1933 and 27 this, an increase of 50 per cent. The general major league increase was 112 per cent.

Ball Much Livelier These figures serve to confirm, partly at least, the claims of several American League batting stars notably Babe Ruth, that the 1934 ball is much livelier, statements of the manufacturers to the contrary notwithstanding.

With three exceptions, every one of the 16 major league clubs has shared in the heavier home run production, and those three at least have held their own in comparison with a year ago.

The figures by clubs, giving the 1934 home run total first and that for the corresponding period a year ago second, follow:

National League
Chicago, 6 and 0; New York 6 and 3; Brooklyn, 5 and 1; Boston, 2 and 0; Philadelphia 2 and 0; St. Louis, 2 and 1; Pittsburgh 3 and 2; Cincinnati 2 and 2.

American League
Philadelphia 7 and 3; St. Louis, 2 and 0; Cleveland 2 and 1; Detroit, 3 and 2; Chicago, 3 and 2; New York, 6 and 5; Washington, 2 and 2; Boston, 2 and 2.

After a one-day vacation granted by the schedule-makers, the athletes will resume firing in a new set of openings in both the National and American Leagues today.

In the National loop, the pace-setting Chicago Cubs found the Cincinnati Reds as their opponents at Chicago, while the St. Louis Cardinals invaded Pittsburgh the New York Giants played at Philadelphia and Brooklyn at Boston.

In the American League, President Roosevelt was to take out the first ball for Washington's home opener against Boston, while Philadelphia played at New York, Chicago at Detroit and Cleveland at St. Louis.

Senators and Red Sox Hope to Stage Belated Ceremonies

Washington, April 24—(AP)—President Roosevelt was given another turn as a big league pitcher today.

Rained out as first-ball hurler at the scheduled Senator-Red Sox season opener last week, Roosevelt and the two teams arranged to stage the belated act this afternoon.

The Chief Executive let it be known that his arm was still limber despite more than a week's lay-off since battling with the big game fish on his southern cruise.

The weatherman, accused by some Washington fans of having little sympathy with the sport, spoke of "showers and cooler" for today. About 20,000 ticket holders gambled he was wrong.

RIGHT HAND KEEPS CLUB-FACE SQUARE WITH BALL

THE HEAVY BLACK LINE ILLUSTRATES THAT PART OF THE SWING WHERE THE RIGHT HAND SHOULD COME INTO USE

© NEA

The beginner in golf must not get the idea the golf swing is entirely a left-handed affair. The right plays its part, but not with any dominance until the hitting region is reached.

The hitting region is that part of the swing where the wrists begin to uncoil. Here, as the left hand is reaching the lowest part in its arc, the right hand comes into the shot by speeding the clubhead through so that at impact the club face will be presented squarely to the ball. It is this snap of the wrists that adds yardage to your tee shot.

If the clubhead is not speeded through by the aid of the right, the hands will get far ahead of the ball before impact and the clubface will be presented to the ball at a distinct angle, sending it off line.

FIRST CAMELS BROUGHT TO THE U.S. MAY 14 1856

JOSHUA WARREN, OF CINCINNATI, OHIO, AMERICA'S FIRST ANARCHIST

LEWIS E. WATERMAN MADE FIRST PRACTICAL FOUNTAIN PEN 1884

ANSWERS TO PREVIOUS QUESTIONS

A SHIPMENT of 34 camels was landed at Indianola, Tex., about 120 miles south of Galveston, the first camels to arrive in America. Warren, father of anarchy in America, owned a "time store" where he sold material on the "cost-plus" basis. First fountain pens were made by hand, but Waterman soon invented machinery to make the pens in large quantities.

BRITISHERS IN PRIME FOR DAVIS CUP TOURNAMENT

Professional Coach of Britain Sees Team Victory

Wimbledon, Eng., Apr. 24—(AP)—America's Davis Cup hopefuls, if they haven't already been advised of it, may as well learn now that they will be up against two important factors in challenging England for tennis honors this season. The first is a better and more confident Fred Perry, ace of the home team. The other is a new and livelier ball.

"I should say Perry is about 30 per cent better than he was at this time a year ago," declared Dan Maskell, professional coach of the British Davis Cup forces, after a brisk workout on the velvety turf of Wimbledon. "His backhand is much better, his forehand is sharper and his service was doing things today that I never taught him."

Quick Wrist Action
"Did you notice the way he was spanking them past me with that quick, wrist-action drive he's developed? Gosh, I couldn't see half of them."

Although he was playing only the second time since early February, Perry displayed an amazing assortment of strokes. His forehand, which he used now and then with a sort of whip-like action that caught Maskell flat-footed, bore little resemblance to the flat, medium paced drive he relied on last summer. It's a far more dangerous weapon.

"I used it a lot in Australia," he said. "It's a winner with this new and faster ball adopted by the International Federation."

To Use Faster Ball
The faster ball, incidentally, will be used both in the All-England championships here and in the Davis Cup contests. Maskell thinks it will help hard-hitters like Frank Shields and Les Stinson, but he doubts if it will help them enough.

"I don't see how any country can take the big cup from us this year," continued Maskell. You just saw how Perry's playing, and I can vouch that Bunny Austin is playing the best tennis of his career right now. In fact he's reached his peak too soon and my job from now on is to ease him up and keep him ready for the Davis Cup."

"So we have this pair—two of the three or four best singles players in the world—and a couple of first-rate doubles players in Hughes and Lee to help out. Tell me who's going to beat that combination."

LONDON PAPERS PLAY UP HULL'S ADDRESS TO AP

Secretary's Talk Is Given Unusual Publicity Abroad

London, Apr. 24—(AP)—Secretary Cordell Hull's trade promouncements and references to Wall Street in a speech before The Associated Press meeting in New York were given smash play in London newspapers today.

The Telegraph gave the most prominent display to his remarks of any speech by a United States government leader—outside President Roosevelt—since the advent of the "new deal" administration.

The Express, which long had been critical of the Roosevelt administration and began swinging the other way only a few weeks ago, linked Hull's remarks editorially with the sensational John Dillinger case.

Learn By Crime Sheet
The Express, saying "you learn about the life of a country by studying its crime sheet," continued: "Hull said a few words yesterday about Wall Street which will help you understand the atmosphere of the country in which Dillinger works."

"When a community lets a pack of man-eating tigers dwell in its midst, it is easy for a lone wolf like Dillinger to slip under the flood gate."

(In his luncheon address, Secretary Hull said the government would have been "justly pilloried" had it not exposed and demanded reform of the "outrageous financial manipulations of stock markets and security flotations which stripped millions of individuals of their life savings and left a finance not worthy of public confidence.")

Corn in China
Corn, native to American continents in the western hemisphere, was grown in China long before it was grown by the English settlers at Jamestown. A photostat copy of a Chinese book published in 1573 reports that maize or Indian corn, there called "imperial grain," had been grown in China for years, and that it had been introduced from the west by way of Tibet or Turkestan. The indications are that the Spaniards discovering maize in the New World, took home the grain from South and Central America, that the Arabs carried it from Spain to Mecca, and that it then spread eastward through Central Asia to China.
